Companies in the Classroom

Leadership that engages children in learning and exploration.

87% of your new workforce wants to engage in volunteering through your company.

275 students impacted in the first year.

Students benefit from seeing first-hand the value of a good education, by learning about companies and the opportunities within. Companies in the Classroom provides the chance for your company to partner with a classroom in need and connect with students to help them learn and grow, creating lasting impact for the community and a meaningful volunteer experience for your employees.

United Way has developed a list of engagements that a company can participate in to help meet the needs of underserved schools and their students.

Companies in the Classroom can:

• Provide students with direct relationships to help them stay on track and succeed in school
• Help develop a skilled workforce that understands the value of giving back
• Foster life skills and improve educational outcomes including school attendance, better grades, and greater interest in careers
• Enhance the school environment by making it a more positive place to learn and grow
• Strengthen the culture of volunteerism in your organization
• Offer your company the volunteer opportunities that will attract quality candidates
